Choosing Outfits

When picking outfits I recommend keeping in mind the word “complement” rather than “match.”

A good rule of thumb: pick 3 or so colors and spread them throughout the family. Don't be afraid to mix a few subtle patterns or textures.

And always keep the location in mind. If we're shooting in a green field, light green dresses might blend in too much with the surroundings.

Softer, pastel and neutral colors tend to photograph better than bright colors - especially since bright colors could reflect on your skin. Cozy sweaters layered over button ups are a great way to stay warm and stylish during the cooler months.
